

Planisware strengthens its partner ecosystem to support scalable growth

- A new global partner strategy to support Planisware's next phase of growth, with a dedicated organization and more than 25 partners already onboarded
- A reinforced partner ecosystem combining global consulting firms and certified specialists to support increasingly complex customer transformation programs
- A scalable delivery model designed to expand implementation capacity, geographic coverage and industry expertise

Paris, France, October 19, 2026 – Planisware, a leading provider of B2B AI-powered SaaS platforms serving the rapidly growing Project Economy, today announced a major expansion of its global partner strategy, including the establishment of a dedicated global partner organization and the launch of new partner programs. With more than 25 partners already onboarded, this initiative aims to expand Planisware's implementation capacity, geographic reach and industry expertise to support its next phase of growth.

As organizations worldwide continue to invest in transformation initiatives across research and development, product innovation, engineering, infrastructure, capital project management and digital portfolios, Planisware has steadily expanded its teams and local presence in recent years to support customers wherever they operate and whatever their level of project maturity.

To further enhance this strategy, Planisware has now established a dedicated global partner organization and launched a new generation of partner programs designed to develop technical, functional and industry expertise across its ecosystem. By combining its own know-how with the capabilities of leading consulting firms, systems integrators and specialized advisory partners to meet growing customer demand. This partner-centric approach complements Planisware's direct customer engagement model, enabling the company to scale its delivery capabilities while maintaining close customer relationships and providing access to specialized expertise and local support.

"As our customers continue to expand their Strategic Portfolio Management capabilities across geographies, business functions and industries, the role of our partner ecosystem becomes increasingly important," said Loïc Sautour, Chief Executive Officer of Planisware. "Our ambition is clear: to ensure that every organization has access to the experience, services and local support required to realize the full value of its investment in Planisware. We have already onboarded more than 25 implementation partners into our new programs and leading consulting firms are working with us to support our customers regionally."

To ensure consistent delivery quality across its expanding ecosystem, Planisware is also introducing enhanced technical and functional training, accreditation and certification programs. These initiatives will equip partners with the expertise needed to support customers throughout their transformation projects, from strategic planning and implementation to change management and long-term value realization.

"Our customers expect more than software. They expect expert advice, guidance and long-term partnership," added Yves Humblot, Director and co-founder of Planisware. "By investing in a stronger ecosystem, we are extending our reach worldwide while preserving what has always set Planisware apart: customer intimacy, domain expertise and continuous innovation."

Through this expanded partner ecosystem, Planisware aims to combine its specialized software expertise and close customer relationships with the scale and capabilities of global consulting firms and certified implementation partners, supporting its continued international expansion.
